Approach to Editorial Standards

PSP Media is a responsible publisher. It seeks to maintain a high standard of journalism and instils this in the editorial staff. PSP does not have any internal manuals.

PSP Media are members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations (ABC) who independently audit PSP's publications and who are recognised as the authoritative industry voice through which best standards of circulation quality are compared.

PSP Media has not sought pre-publication guidance from IPSO. However, it would do so if it needed advice on interpreting the Editors' Code.

PSP Media abides by the Editors' Code of Practice (Jan 2018). This code came into effect from 1st January 2018 and all editorial staff have been made aware of this by an editorial staff meeting, with reference provided to the link directly to the IPSO site: <https://www.ipso.co.uk/editors-code-of-practice>. PSP Media relies on the journalists providing copy to be accurate in their writing and uses best practices to ensure that all content is accurate.

Complaints

PSP Media has not received any complaints. PSP Media requires all complaints to be made in writing by letter or email and such complaints and the outcome would be recorded in the company complaints file. If a complaint was made, it would be passed to Paul Grant for resolution.

Additional to above, for any complaints with regards to an online article, we retain the original copy prior to any changes that may be made following the complaint.

Training

PSP Media provides on the job training for Editors. A number of the editors have been with the company for several years and PSP promotes internally if possible when a position becomes vacant.
